

ABSTRACT

A hard head foil cap is provided for foiling hair on an individual, and comprises a head cap provided with a plurality of long narrow slits, <sup>each having an opening with a width in the range of 1/8" to 1/4"</sup> in two or more orientations, <sup>through the slits</sup> spaced around the head cap, <sup>in two or more orientations</sup> through which <sup>hair</sup> hair shanks may be pulled for coloring, foiling, highlighting, or bleaching. A hard head foil cap for imparting designs to hair using a head cap with a plurality of long narrow slits spaced around the cap in two or more orientations, said slits configured to form of designs to impart said designs in the highlighted hair. A hard head foil cap made by the process of providing an existing, mass manufactured hair cap it with a plurality of long narrow slits spaced around the cap in two or more orientations. A method of treating hair.